1. Write a short scene in which your novel's protagonist and antagonist are both in line at a coffee shop. Describe—in one page—what would happen, what each character would say, and how any bystanders would react.
2. Draw a detailed map of your book's setting (if it has more than one, draw the most relevant/prominent one). Include and label any major landmarks and the sites of any important historical events.
3. Pick the theme song for your book--can be a popular hit, golden oldie, or any kind of song provided it has (appropriate) lyrics. Explain in a paragraph or two why this song exemplifies your novel. Include the lyrics.
4. Create a concrete poem (Google for examples) about the main character, a theme from your book, or an important image in your book.
5. Think about what life would be like if you lived during your book's time period. Write a short story or journal entry of one page describing your thoughts.
6. Create a recipe for your book's main theme using elements from the story. For an example, go to http://mymultigenre.blogspot.com/2013/06/recipe_6.html.
7. Turn your book (or as much as you've read of your book) into a short (2 page max) children's story. Add illustrations!
8. Create an acrostic poem (Google for examples) of the main character's name to describe his/her various characteristics.
9. Write a 1 page journal entry from the antagonist's point of view that describes an important event in the story.
10. If your character has to make a major decision in the story, write a pros/cons list that s/he may have used to make his/her choice. Then write one paragraph describing the choice YOU would have made and explain why.
